The Electric Power Research Institute (EPRI) is bringing together electricity sector stakeholders through its Electrification 2019 U.S. Regional Symposium Series in Berkeley, CA, Brooklyn, NY, and San Antonio, TX, to discuss and explore the benefits and opportunities associated with efficient building and transportation electrification at a regional level. The symposium series will bring together a diverse group of utility leaders, regulators, automakers, charging providers, researchers, academia, vendors, economic development groups, public interest groups, and others to explore the costs and benefits of building and transportation electrification; advanced electric technologies; and success stories, comprehensive strategies, and opportunities for implementation.
